New Mexico author Jimmy Santiago Baca, one of the most respected literary figures in the Southwest, will be featured in a free reading at the Institute of American Indian Arts.

The reading, which takes place on Wednesday, October 18, will be held in the LTC auditorium on the IAIA Campus. The event will start promptly at 7 p.m., and is expected to last 90 minutes.

Among the works that will be featured that evening is an untitled novel that Baca is currently working on, as well as material from “Winter Poems Along the Rio Grande”, which was published by New Directions.

The IAIA Museum in downtown Santa Fe is the premier exhibiting institution for contemporary Native and Indigenous art from across North America. The Institute of American Indian and Alaska Native Culture and Arts Development (IAIA) is a Congressionally chartered, multi-Tribal center of higher education dedicated to the preservation, study, creative application and contemporary expression of American Indian and Alaska Native arts and cultures. IAIA achieves its mission through programs of higher education and outreach to students, Tribal communities and the public. IAIA is committed to quality education programs and an individual-centric approach that enrich career opportunities for students.
